Technology Tips and Requirements for ZOOM ART CLASSES

All students will need space, supplies, and adjustable lighting: An art table (that can get dirty) and a place to organize your supplies. You may want to cover the table to protect it. You need a lamp that can be moved around to the desired position. You need easel if you are working on canvas.

Technology requirements: You must have your camera on to participate. Please do a test video feed with your Zoom camera (computer, iPad or phone) prior to class, to check whether your artwork will be seen by the teacher. This is important so I can give feedback. In your test, try different things. You may need to raise lighting on you & our artwork and lower lighting behind you, so you do not show up as a silhouette. TECH TIP: Here are some links on how to use your phone as a webcam, so I can see your artwork. Name your phone “XXX’S Cam” and choose cancel to the audio option as you only want your voice on one device. The video explains how to do it pretty well (but you might want something more stable than soup cans:) More info in additional links.

OPTIONAL: Free feedback & assistance: Since artworks are not kept in the studio, students may choose to work in between classes. I am happy to offer advice through email or text. Students may use source photos they have taken themselves, or research free images online. Students can also get feedback on how to select, arrange and light their own still life and how to take their own source photos with proper lighting and composition (landscape, animals, people, etc.)

SCHEDULED TECH SESSION!

I will offer a 15-minute technology test session to test your artwork camera setup, and work the kinks out.
